

Nextel now charges customers for giving them an itemized listing of telephone calls they have made. This was always automatically generated. I just want to see if the fcc governs the information that phone/wireless companies are required to provide their customers.